AT THE ANNENBERG

Annenberg Space For Photography To Present Digital Darkroom

THE ANNENBERG SPACE FOR PHOTOGRAPHY

© Jerry Uelsmann

The Annenberg Space For Photography's next exhibition, Digital Darkroom, will bow Saturday, December 17 and run through May 30, 2012.

Digital Darkroom features the work of 17 artists from around the world that explore the intersection of art and technology. The exhibit features the work of: Josef Astor, Pierre Beteille, Joel Grimes, Ted Grudowski, Claudia Kunin, Chris Levine, Bonny Pierce Lhotka, Khuong Nguyen, Mike Pucher, Jean-François Rauzier, Martine Roch, Christopher Schneberger, Brooke Shaden, Stanley Smith, Maggie Taylor, Jerry Uelsmann and Jean-Marie Vives.

© Brooke Shaden

Each artist is a master of different types of digital techniques: compositing highly layered imagery, working in 3D and lenticular imaging, meticulously stitching together images, using lighting in highly inventive ways, and so on.

The show will present an interesting juxtaposition of young artists immersed in digital work against Uelsmann, a master of darkroom compositing techniques. The artists come from a range of backgrounds, each specializing in fine art, commercial art, portraiture, still life, fashion, architectural, or other types of photographic and illustrative expression. However, many of the artists cross genres and combine multiple techniques to create their unique work.

Digital Darkroom is comprised of an 80-image print show with 2-6 images contributed by each of the featured photographers. Hundreds of additional images from Digital Darkroom's photographers will also be showcased in vivid detail on the two 14' by 7' high-resolution screens in the Photography Space's Digital Gallery.

Serving as curatorial advisor is Russell Brown, a Senior Creative Director at Adobe Systems Incorporated and an Emmy Award-winning instructor. Brown was instrumental in the introduction of Adobe Photoshop, which transformed the techniques used to manipulate images. Renowned for his entertaining style as a Photoshop teacher, he has helped the world's leading photographers, publishers, art directors and artists to master techniques that enable their digital creations.

The exhibition includes a 3D film shot in 5K resolution using RED EPIC cameras, presented in a specially created screening room. This film includes interviews with 3D experts and historians Ray Zone and David Kuntz, 3D artists Ted Grudowski and Christopher Schneberger, and explores how 3D artists Claudia Kunin and Mike Pucher photograph their subjects and alter them digitally to create 3D results. Key elements of the history of stereoscopic photography are also in the film. Digital Darkroom will run through May 28, 2012.

Tom's Tip:

They say nobody walks in Los Angeles, but there are plenty of good reasons to get out of the car and use those shoes for something other than fashion statements.

If you're looking to get out into the Great Outdoors, check out these websites for information on some of the best hiking to be found anywhere. There are hikes of varying degrees of difficulty right in Los Angeles, in the Santa Monica Mountains or east of the city in the San Gabriel Mountains.

- www.lamountains.com
- www.modernhiker.com/la-hiking

If being an urban adventurer is more your style, try some of the available walking tours of the area. L.A. Conservancy has a variety of tours of downtown Los Angeles covering some of the amazing architectural landmarks like Union Station, the Bradbury Building and Broadway's theater district.

Hollywood Heritage offers walking tours of Hollywood Boulevard from Vine Street to the Chinese Theater, showing off the best of the boulevard's architecture and offering up some of Movieland's epic off-screen tales.

Not to be outdone, Santa Monica Conservancy has its own walking tours serving up the history and architecture of the beachfront city. And finally, if you want to combine your walking with some culinary adventures, try Melting Pot tours, which offers adventurous, multicultural noshing at each stop.
